‘Good it is for a man to stand with his hat off in the presence of that which he knows to be better than himself. To salute with what of reverence is in him unworldly aims, simple apostolic life. What more happy life than that of the Catholic Bishop in El Seo! I had met a man who believed his creed and acted his preaching to the letter. Laus Deo! The salt hath not yet lost his savour and not all men have ceased to hear ‘the still small voice’/ Extracted from p 165 of ‘The adventurer in Spain’ by S.
