

Bank House
November 17th 1894.
Dear Unwin

I shall do two pages in a few days. I am going down to stay with Ruskin for a while, going off on Wednesday next. But I'll send from there. If anything special, address, care of J Ruskin, Brantwood, Colston Lake, RSO.

I wish you would draw the attention of the Publisher's Circular privately to the note in their Edinburgh correspondence article which mentions Wallace's absurd charge of plagiarism without my reply. If they mention one they should do the other. The Literary World makes the amends this week. If I were you, I should send a cutting from the Academy. I have [note] one of my letter of last Saturday and the enclosed cutting from that from their columns of this week and ask that as they mention one they should the other.

Wallace wrote a book which never I suspect sold 700 copies called 'Scotland yesterday' at the time of the publication of the Stickit and he has never forgiven its success.

ever yours

SRC.